Empathy sometimes also has negative consequences, so we act too emotionally and thus unjustifiably. Empathy in child rearing is especially "dangerous", since it leads to relenting to the child's immature impulses. Compassion yes, not empathy. Buddhism also teaches all this. A distinction must be made between doing good and doing what feels good.

"Empathy is what makes us human; it's what makes us both subjects and objects of moral concern. Empathy betrays us only when we take it as a moral guide." - Paul Bloom, Against Empathy I'm a sucker for pop psychology or moral philosophy or moral politics books.

Against Empathy: The Case for Rational Compassion by Paul ...

Against Empathy: The Case for Rational Compassion is a 2016 book written by psychologist Paul Bloom. The book draws on the distinctions between empathy, compassion, and moral decision making. Bloom argues that empathy is not the solution to problems that divide people and is a poor guide for decision making. However, he is not completely against empathy; he believes that empathy can motivate kindness to make the world a better place. Overall, the book received mixed reviews as some reviewers cri

Opinions | Trump is running against empathy

Bloom's Against Empathy: The Case for Rational Compassion will be of interest to those seeking to develop their own moral muscles and to those interested in helping others cultivate the social emotional skills they need to foster a kinder world. Bloom argues that empathy, or feeling or experiencing what another person feels or experiences, on the whole makes us less caring and just, and more parochial, short-sighted, and insensitive to the scope of human suffering.
